Cookies

Cookies are small files that are saved on your computer by websites you visit. They are used to help websites operate more efficiently by remembering activities and preferences made by you as well as providing anonymous information to the website owner such as the number of visits to a page, how long they stayed etc., which helps make decisions on future improvements to the site.

The table below explains the cookies we use and why:

| Cookie Name              | Purpose   | Expires                                      |
|---------------------------------|--|---|
| ASP.NET_SessionID        | This cookie remembers selections and preferences you have already made or information you have already given such as searches and completed forms                                 | When you close your browser (end of session) |
| WBSC                     | This cookie remembers your unique identity and is used to keep you logged into the website  | When you close your browser (end of session) |
| RequestVerificationToken | This cookie is used as a security measure to verify that individual requests made to our website are originating from your computer and not from a malicious third party computer | When you close your browser (end of session) |

Most browsers allow you to control what cookies are saved to your computer – to find out how to change your settings, as well as more information about cookies in general, please visit www.allaboutcookies.org.
